Ready or not, schools are now back in session

Welcome back. In the aftermath of union negotiations and a funding crisis, students returned to the classroom.

Crawling with students and parents, South Philadelphia High School looked full.

In the chaos of 24 school closures, several consolidations and reforms, South Philly High's student body doubled after it merged with Bok Technical High School.

In the aftermath of the budget cuts and some 3,000 layoffs, the high school didn't replace two retired guidance counselors.

South Philly High School Principal Otis Hackney's biggest challenge is adapting.

"Getting the ninth graders acclimated to high school, and simultaneously getting the students from Bok and South Philly to come together as one school is the challenge," he said. "But we'll figure it out."

Students returned to class yesterday and found the classrooms they left behind had changed over the summer holiday.

Inside the cafeteria at South Philly High, Superintendent William Hite said that he visited several schools yesterday. "For the most part, our students are excited to be back in school," he said.

"Many of our schools have resources — hall monitors, security, cafeteria monitors — but we don't have the staff we had a year ago and that's really important. So there's still a lot of critical staff members that we need to add back when we get revenue," Hite said. "We need more counselors, we need more assistant principals, we need music to go all year, we need sports to go all year and we need more teachers."

Mayor Michael Nutter also visited the South Philly high school and stressed that funding issues need attention.

"You can't do this on the cheap, and you can't balance budgets on the backs of students and teachers and administrators," he said. "So everyone has to put something in."

Standing amid a bloated cafeteria, Hite addressed whether this school crisis will become the new normal for urban schools.

"We cannot allow the city, the state, school district, anybody else, to think that this is normal," he said. "Because our children now are in schools, they still need additional resources and it's really important for us during the course of this year to make sure those resources are returned."

Negotiations

Union, district still at the table

The union and the school district are still at the negotiating table, and there is still no resolution.

Superintendent William Hite said yesterday that negotiations are ongoing, but are happening with much more frequency.

The two sides spoke well into Sunday evening, "and now we're back at it today," Hite said. "Both sides are committed to finding a way to resolve this."

Philadelphia Federation of Teachers President Jerry Jordan said negotiations were going "slowly."

Pot pill. NJ Assembly approves edible THC pill for sick children

Applying revisions suggested by Gov. Chris Christie, the New Jersey Assembly approved a bill yesterday that would change the state's medical marijuana law to benefit suffering children.

The bill, which has already been accepted in the Senate, allows marijuana producers to sell edible products safe for children with debilitating diseases. Adult patients would not be allowed to use the product. At least two doctors would need to approve the treatment. While Christie vetoed the original bill last month, he will have to sign the revised bill before it becomes a law. METRO

Police: 3-year-old girl starved to death in 'flea-infested' home

Heartbreak. Police have taken the girl's father, 30-year-old Carlos Rivera, into custody.

Police are investigating the starvation death of a 3-year-old special-needs girl who died early yesterday at a West Oak Lane home, which authorities described as squalid and flea-infested.

Officers were first called to Einstein Medical Center, where Nathalyz Rivera, 3, had been brought into the emergency room shortly before 2 a.m. and pronounced dead. She weighed just 11 pounds and showed "obvious signs of neglect," according to Homicide Unit Capt. James Clark.

The child's father, Carlos Rivera, was allegedly with his five children at their home on the 7300 block of Sommers Road

Quoted

"This is one of the worst cases of abuse that I've seen in my five years down in Homicide Unit. It's very sad and very disturbing. I saw the photos, and even for me, they were very difficult to look at."

when he found Nathalyz inside the bedroom around midnight and noticed she wasn't breathing. "Instead of calling police or the ambulance, [he] called the mother, who was over at a male friend's house," Clark said. The mom and friend took the girl to the ER.

Clark said though Nathalyz suffered bruises, police believe they may have been caused by insect or rodent bites. He also noted that, despite Nathalyz's "severe disabilities," she hadn't seen a doctor in over a year.

Carlos Rivera was taken into custody and Clark said he "fully expected" the mother would be charged. She was not taken into custody as of press time.

The couple's remaining children — aged 9, 8, 7 and 3 — will be remanded to the custody of the Department of Human Services.

Airtime. Temple band to perform on 'Good Morning America'

Temple University is slated to get plenty of publicity this week from "Good Morning America."

Temple's Diamond Marching Band is scheduled to perform some contemporary pop hits on the morning show today, the school has announced.

On Thursday, led by the school's Cherry Crusade group of "die-hard student fans," busloads of cherry-and-white-clad Temple students will travel up the New Jersey Turnpike to New York City's Times Square for a pep rally sure to get some serious GMA airtime.

"This is great for Temple University," said junior Evan S. Feinstein, Cherry Crusade's vice president for marketing and Temple student government's director of university pride and traditions, in a news release yesterday. "We're very proud and excited for this opportunity to show Temple as one of the great universities in the nation."

"Good Morning America" airs in the Philadelphia market on WPVI-TV 6ABC from 7 to 9 a.m.

Temple alumni living in the New York City area are encouraged to head into Manhattan to participate in Thursday's pep rally at the show's Times Square studios. METRO

Councilman proposes campaign finance law

Councilman W. Wilson Goode Jr. will introduce legislation on Thursday that limits campaign contributions from city contractors and lobbyists.

Goode said in a release that under the proposed law, any business that makes a campaign contribution to a candidate for city office or to an incumbent will, during that candidate's term, be ineligible to apply for or enter into any non-competitively bid contract over $25,000, and to be a subcontractor.

The legislation further dictates no city lobbyists can make campaign contributions of any amount, including through one or more political committees. METRO

Obama ramps up effort to convince Congress and public on Syria strike

Conflict. Lawmakers worry even limited strikes could lead to another prolonged war in the region.

Obama administration officials say there is no doubt that Assad was responsible for the attacks. / GETTY IMAGES

President Barack Obama ramped up an intensive lobbying blitz yesterday to convince a skeptical Congress to support U.S. military strikes against Syria, even as lawmakers criticized the administration's approach and proposed alternative resolutions.

Obama planned six television interviews last night, and is due to visit the Capitol today to speak directly to lawmakers before making a nationally televised address from the White House in the evening.

The intensifying public offensive comes ahead of a crucial Senate test vote expected on Wednesday on whether to authorize military action in Syria, in response to last month's chemical weapons attack against Syrian civilians.

Some members of Congress say Obama has lost support for a strike over the last week. Mike Rogers, the Republican chairman of the House Intelligence Committee and a supporter of strikes, said yesterday that Obama had "fumbled" the message on Syria and faced a critical moment.

Syrian President Bashar al-Assad tried to feed that fear yesterday, telling CBS television that a U.S. action would lead to reprisal strikes and unintended consequences. REUTERS

Russia urges Syria to cede control of chemical arms

Russia urged Syria yesterday to put its chemical weapons under international control in the hope that this would avert U.S. military strikes over an alleged gas attack, and President Bashar al-Assad's government said it welcomed the proposal.

Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov said he conveyed the idea to Syrian Foreign Minister Walid al-Moualem at talks in Moscow and that Russia expected "a quick and, I hope, a positive answer."

"If the establishment of international control over chemical weapons [in Syria] makes it possible to avoid strikes, then we will immediately get to work with Damascus," Lavrov said.

UN floats plan to destroy Syrian chemical weapons stocks

In a bid to help the U.N. Security Council overcome its "embarrassing paralysis" on Syria, the U.N. chief said yesterday he may ask the council to demand that Damascus move its chemical arms stocks to sites where they can be safely stored and destroyed.

Later this week or next week, the U.N. team of chemical weapons experts is expected to submit a report to Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon about its investigation of an Aug. 21 chemical attack.

"I have already been considering certain proposals that I could make to the Security Council when I present the investigation team's report," Ban said. REUTERS

Matthew Cordle posted his confession on YouTube last week. / YOUTUBE

The Ohio man who confessed in an online video to killing another man in a drunken-driving crash has been indicted on two charges that could put him in prison for more than eight years, a county prosecutor said yesterday.

A grand jury has indicted Matthew Cordle, 22, on one count of aggravated vehicular homicide and one count of operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, Franklin County Prosecutor Ron O'Brien said in a statement.

The indictment alleges Cordle had a blood alcohol level of 0.191, more than twice the legal limit of 0.08 in Ohio, when he crashed into a vehicle driven by Vincent Canzani, 61, early on June 22, killing him. Cordle was injured in the accident and treated at a hospital where his blood alcohol level was tested, according to Cordle's attorney George Breitmayer.

Cordle posted a three and a half minute video titled "I killed a man" online last week, admitting to driving down a highway the wrong way into oncoming traffic, striking Canzani's car. In the video he said he was with friends "just trying to have a good time." Cordle urged others to learn from his mistake. REUTERS

JPMorgan to stop making student loans

Not giving Chase.
Exec: "We just don't see this as a market that we can significantly grow."

JPMorgan Chase & Co will stop making student loans in October, according to a document reviewed by Reuters last week, after the biggest U.S. bank concluded that competition from federal government programs limits its ability to expand the business.

The company will stop accepting applications for private student loans on Oct. 12, at the end of the peak borrowing season for this school year, according to a memo from the company to colleges.

The move means less competition for remaining players in the market, like Wells Fargo & Co and Discover Financial Services.

"We just don't see this as a market that we can significantly grow," said Thasunda Duckett, chief executive for auto and student loans at Chase, in an interview last week.

Not making more loans "puts us in a position to redeploy those resources, as well as focus on our No. 1 priority, which is getting the regulatory control environment strengthened," she said.

By the numbers

$200M

Amount JPMorgan handed out in education loans in 2012

JPMorgan was ordered by federal regulators in January to strengthen its risk controls and its compliance with anti-money laundering standards after the company came under intense scrutiny following its $6.2 billion "London Whale" derivatives loss. CEO Jamie Dimon vowed in April to make the company's controls his top priority and said the bank would scale back some of its growth initiatives to do that.

The decision follows the bank's move last year to make education loans available only to existing Chase bank customers. The retail bank has some 64 million customers and 5,657 branches. Last year, Chase made education loans to 12,500 people for a total of about $200 million.

The company's student loan portfolio at the end of June held $11 billion — less than 0.5 percent — of JPMorgan's $2.44 trillion of assets.

The student loan business is not among those that JPMorgan has publicly said are being probed by government authorities for possibly illegal practices. Those under investigation include mortgage banking, credit card collections, rate-setting for floating-rate business loans and hiring for investment banking in China.

The Chase portfolio includes $5 billion of private loans and $6 billion of loans backed by government guarantees that were granted under programs that have been discontinued. The portfolio has been shrinking by roughly $1 billion to $2 billion a year since mid-2010, when Congress acted to bypass the banks and have the government lend directly to students.

Connecting the civil rights era to today

Equality. A grant from the NEH will spark a two-year conversation at Bryn Mawr College.

At Bryn Mawr College, students, faculty and community members will be learning about the civil rights movement — which may sound like a fairly typical academic panel discussion, but it isn't. Created Equal: America's Civil Rights Struggle is a two-year initiative that comes to the Main Line courtesy of a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The program will screen four documentaries dealing with civil rights, from the pre-Civil War era through the 1960s. Each semester for the next two years will be dedicated to one film.

While there are many faculty and community members involved with the project, Olivia Castello, outreach and educational technology librarian at Bryn Mawr, is the woman making it all come together. "This fall we will be screening 'The Loving Story,'" says Castello. "We're showing a sort of abridged version of it to allow time for the discussion." The documentary, though very influential and critical to the conversation of civil rights, is not the driving force. It's the panel and post-panel discussion that are the meat of the project.

"Discussion is an explicit part of the grant," says Castello. "The idea is to promote a more public discussion [of civil rights], and that's why one of the requirements for the grant is to make it open to the public. We're holding it in Thomas Great Hall, which is very accessible to everyone."

Castello says that when applying for the grant she was thinking about Bryn Mawr and the surrounding Main Line community. There are several institutions that will partake in the Created Equal project, but as Castello puts it, "We're hoping to add a little Bryn Mawr flavor to it."

Why, though, is it important to be remembering and talking about the civil rights movement in 2013? "People want to know where we are at today," Castello says. "Is the struggle over? That's a complicated question that deserves a more nuanced conversation. We feel that it's important to observe the anniversaries of civil rights events in a way that is inquisitive and connects to today."

On the panel

Each installment will have a diverse mix of academics and local activists on the panel. The first, on Nov. 14, includes Regina Austin, professor of law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School; Florence Goff, former associate CIO and equal opportunity officer at Bryn Mawr College; Cynthia Chalker, director of diversity at Friends Seminary and former acting director of institutional diversity at Bryn Mawr; and Sharon Ullman, professor of American history and coordinator of gender and sexuality studies, also at Bryn Mawr.

CULTURE

Twitter feed

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Michael Chiklis just wants to laugh, Chloe Grace Moretz is feeling geeky, Mindy Kaling has fashion envy and Lena Dunham really had her hopes up for this one.

@MichaelChiklis: WTF is this brand of awkward, humorless comedy that so many films go for these days? Awkward is awkward, not funny...it's excruciating!

@ChloeGMoretz: remember that time I made tons of chemistry jokes.. ohhh what a nerd i am.

@mindykaling: I wanna pull off a jean jacket as seamlessly as Tim Olyphant does @lenadunham: I lost the role in 50 Shades of Grey so you won't be hearing from me for a while.

Aguilera shows off new bod

Just once, I'd like a recently slimmed-down starlet to thank her trainers, giant bank account and personal chef for losing weight, otherwise known as "telling the truth." Instead, we always get the bunk that they lost 20 or so pounds simply by "running around with their kids." The latest offender? Christina Aguilera, who insists that regular trips to the gym are not why she can fit back into her skinny jeans. "If I can squeeze in a workout, great. If not, that's OK, too," she tells Maxim magazine. She says she has lost the weight trying to keep up with 5-year-old son Max. "Running around with him all day is pretty good exercise," she insists.

Robin Quivers reveals cancer battle

Robin Quivers revealed yesterday on Howard Stern's Sirius XM radio show that she has been fighting bladder cancer for the past year.

Quivers, who left the show last year for a then-undisclosed reason, revealed that the cancer had been discovered in the endometrial tissue in her uterus. Thanks to serious treatment, including surgery, chemo and radiation, the cancer is now in remission.

ROBIN QUIVERS
FILMMAGIC

"It was so huge that it was lying on all the organs in my pelvis, and they literally had to scrape it off when they got to it," Quivers recounted about the tumor. "They couldn't even figure out how to operate at one point because it was so massive."

Stern said that if it wasn't such a happy outcome, he would have ended the show.

"I'll f—ing kill you if you have cancer. I'm not doing the show without you. ... I'm quitting if you're not doing the show," he joked/threatened when Quivers initially left the show for what she explained was a "procedure."

Patrick Stewart posts adorable photo on Twitter after wedding

Patrick Stewart is off the market. The former "Star Trek" captain married Sunny Ozell this weekend, with good friend Ian McKellan officiating the wedding. Always a fan of frivolous fun, the "X-Men" star announced his marriage by posting a photo to Twitter of himself and Ozell buried neck-deep in a ball pit with the caption, "Yes, married."

McKellan also took to Twitter to announce the event, posting a photo of himself with his Doctor of Divinity certificate and a T-shirt with the word "minister" emblazoned on it. "I did my part," he wrote.

Fey comes back to 'SNL' as host

Tina Fey will be coming back to "Saturday Night Life" as the host of the 39th season opener on Sept. 28. Arcade Fire will be the musical guest. Since they always know how to make a splash, SNL also announced that twerker extraordinaire, Miley Cyrus, will come back as host and musical guest on Oct. 5.

A royal intruder

Prince Andrew, the Queen of England's second-oldest son, had a less-than-pleasant time at Buckingham Palace recently when he was mistaken for an intruder and held at gunpoint. Andrew was detained in the gardens of the palace just two days after an actual intruder had made his way onto the grounds. "There is a high turnover of the police on duty at the Palace, but you'd think anyone would know what Prince Andrew looks like," a source says. "It's fair to say that to describe the duke as unhappy and the two officers as highly embarrassed is the biggest understatement of the century."

On the fringe of frustration

Theater. The Idiopathic Ridiculopathy Consortium takes on Kafka.

Ethan Lipkin is The Mayor and David Stanger plays K in "The Castle." / JOHANNA AUSTIN@AUSTINART.ORG

Tina Brock was feeling a little frustrated when she answered the phone. With set designer Anna Kiraly off teaching a workshop in Hungary, the co-founder and artistic director of the Idiopathic Ridiculopathy Consortium was laboriously trying to capture an ethereal, haunting atmosphere that Kiraly, a skilled painter, could far more easily conjure.

The process likely proved useful to the absurdist theater company's latest production, however. As part of this year's Fringe Festival, the IRC is producing an adaptation of Franz Kafka's novel "The Castle," a bleak comedy all about frustrated desires.

The novel itself was a source of frustration to its legendary author, who left it unfinished — ending mid-sentence — when he died of tuberculosis in 1924.

The story traces the futile and confounding journey of a land surveyor known only as K, who is summoned to a village by officials from an ominously looming castle for reasons he can never quite ascertain.

"He keeps coming up against opposition and obstacles and a very strange world that doesn't make sense to him," Brock says. "The people in the world seem to understand it very well, but it has that surreal quality where you come into a situation that definitely has a structure but you don't know what it is. K wants one simple thing, but he can't seem to communicate what he needs from a spiritual or a language perspective, and he just continues on and falls apart psychologically and physically."

Typical of Kafka, the novel is marked by a distinct lack of hope or comprehension of one's fate, but also contains a remarkable amount of (admittedly dark) humor. "I find it hilarious," says Brock, who cites influences including "Fawlty Towers," Terry Gilliam's "Brazil" and the Lemony Snicket books for her own approach to the material.

"There's something really funny to me about a continued, repetitive attack on a single-minded goal. There's something inherently funny about that to me," she says. "A lot of absurdist work can be very precious about making a large statement and sags under its own weight. But the weight is already in the play, in the writing, the style, the magnitude of issues that you're dealing with. So it helps to have a sense of humor."

Bringing out 'your inner oddball'

FringeArts.
"Enlightenment on E Floor North" looks at what happens when you get really, really bored.

In 2010, when Rebecca Noon and Jed Hancock-Brainerd were struggling to get Strange Attractor Theatre Company off the ground, they both worked at the RISD Museum in Providence, R.I. Noon manned the front desk and Brainerd was a security guard in the gallery, on his feet for hours at a time — and fighting boredom every minute of the day.

Strange Attractor's latest play, "Enlightenment on E Floor North," part of this month's Fringe Festival, explores the petty hierarchies, flights of imagination and absurd rituals that emerge when people are forced to stand in one place for eight hours a day.

If you go

'Enlightenment on E Floor North'
Through Sept. 18
The White Space at Crane Old School
1417 N. Second St.
$10-$15, 215-413-1318
www.fringearts.com

It's a concept that fits perfectly into Attractor's brand of physical, group-created comedic theater.

"Security guards often have a reputation for being kind of odd, but we don't feel like odd people become security guards, we feel like being a guard brings out your inner oddball," says Noon. "It's like being a clown: You put on the nose to discover who your clown is. You put on a blazer to discover your inner security guard."

Let the Weight Be Over!

My weight loss journey began a little more than 2 years ago, during an annual physical. My doctor told me that if I didn't do something about my weight – and fast – that I would likely end up with very serious medical conditions. My five foot frame was carrying 259 lbs.! I had been trying conventional diets for years. I would lose weight, but never the amount I needed to lose, and was never able to maintain the weight loss.

"2 years and 110 lbs. after surgery, and I am still on my journey!" – Lovie

I knew my doctor was right. So, after some research, I found the Center for Surgical Weight Loss at Hahnemann University Hospital. With the guidance of the surgeon, the dietitian, and the rest of the surgical weight loss team, I was motivated to get serious about losing weight. In fact, by following the dietitian's advice, I was able to lose 27 pounds even before surgery! I am grateful to the entire surgical weight loss team – they provided the education and support I needed to reclaim my life!*

This surgery is designed for those with a body mass index equal to or greater than 40 or equal to or greater than 35 with serious co-morbidities.

Results may vary. This testimonial reflects results achieved by this patient. As each case must be independently evaluated and managed, actual weight loss will vary.*

To attend a FREE seminar call the Center for Surgical Weight Loss at Hahnemann University Hospital at 267-330-0760 or visit our website at www.hahnemannbariatrics.com to register on-line.

Juneau

Across the country

Strange Attractor formed at the London International School of Performance. The five core members live in Philadelphia, Providence and Juneau, Alaska. Rather than forcing each other to move to a particular city, the troupe has attempted to create work by visiting each other throughout the year. "Enlightenment on E Floor North" was largely developed in Alaska. Though Philadelphia is the site of official opening, many in-progress versions of the play have been performed in small cities and towns surrounding Juneau.

"Things that resonate with people are certainly different out there," says Noon. "But I feel like with this show, you know, everybody everywhere seems to be able to relate to a really crappy job."

Good parenting advice — with a twist

Writing under the influence. Authors highlight the trials and cocktails of parenting.

Lyranda Martin Evans and Fiona Stevenson are the comediennes-turned-authors behind the new book, "Reasons Mommy Drinks." They will be on the "Today" show on NBC on Friday. / GUSTAVO GONZALEZ

"Reasons Mommy Drinks," the new book by Lyranda Martin Evans and Fiona Stevenson, could have been subtitled "What to Expect After You've Been Expecting."

"We really felt like this was the ultimate baby shower gift," says Evans. "Both of us got a lot of doom and gloom books, so when we were writing we thought we wanted to do a baby shower gift book you can read and actually laugh with."

It's a mom's-eye view to surviving the first 18 months of parenting, written chronologically from the baby showers to when the little ones are finally starting to walk and talk.

The book is part advice, part bartender's guide that offers up a coping mechanism that comes with a twist — a lemon twist.

Each of the parenting challenges — dealing with nap time, in-laws or the first haircut — is paired with a mocktail or cocktail. The day care chapter, for instance, is matched with the Day Care Defense, a fruity rum drink they say will "numb your guilt, kill germs and boost your immune system."

Two years ago when the pair (friends since high school) found themselves pregnant at the same time, they decided to also give birth to ReasonsMommyDrinks.com.

"Like all working moms," Stevenson says, "we are time-starved and want to maximize our time with our families. Our long history of creative collaboration and shared work ethic makes us an incredibly productive team. It's amazing what we can accomplish in a two-hour power writing session during nap time. We wanted to give a voice to the new generation of moms — accomplished, ambitious women who, as they transition to their new role as parents, want to do the absolute best for their new baby in every possible way, without completely losing themselves in the process."

Quoted

"We wanted to give a voice to the new generation of moms — accomplished, ambitious women who, as they transition to their new role as parents, want to do the absolute best for their new baby in every possible way, without completely losing themselves in the process." Fiona Stevenson

The blog was an instant hit, and the success of the blog inspired them to think beyond the Internet.

Evans says the tone of the book is tongue-in-cheek but she hopes parents — or even single people, who she said can "use it as a birth-control reminder" — will read the book and realize they are not alone.

"I think different women will take away different things from the book," Evans says. "The overarching theme, the best thing you can take away from it, is we're all in this together and it is so worth it. The very last drink in the book is the Kool-Aid. It's like, 'Drink the Kool-Aid.' It's worth it."

Fashion Week travel diary: Rebecca Taylor

Rebecca Taylor walked the runway during the Rebecca Taylor show on Sunday during New York Fashion Week.

"This summer I nipped over to London for a few days as part of a European design inspiration trip with my husband, Wayne. I actually lived in Britain for a time, so I always enjoy going back, whether for business or pleasure. I almost always stay at the Covent Garden Hotel, a lovely hotel with an intimate feel and a great location, in the heart of the theater district near the Royal Opera House.

Wayne and I sampled some wonderful cuisine; my favorites were The Modern Pantry in Clerkenwell (healthy and delicious), The Providores and Tapa Room in Marylebone (boasts Britain's largest range of New Zealand premium wines — a must-try) and my top choice of the trip, Kopapa — the chef, Peter Gordon, is a fellow Kiwi, so I was thrilled to try his restaurant. I wish we'd been able to spend more time there, but Wayne and I already have a list of places we want to catch on the next trip across the pond." METRO

"We made some time for leisure since we were a bit tired from the travel. We spent a perfect summer afternoon at Hyde Park, complete with charming little ducks splashing around in the water." / COURTESY REBECCA TAYLOR

"I love all the shops in London and made sure to stop by my favorites: Dover Street Market, a beautiful shop with a great jewelry selection, and Content Beauty/Wellbeing — so many of my favorite natural, organic beauty brands in one spot. I could spend hours in there. I also went into a shop I'd never been, Ben Pentreath, a charming little store in Bloomsbury for British ephemera. And of course, it's never a trip to London without stopping by the Liberty store on Regent Street. Such a gorgeous, massive space; so aesthetically beautiful."

Fashion Week: The making of a new star

Tommy Hilfiger

Opening Ceremony pre-show

As creative directors of Kenzo, Carol Lim and Humberto Leon have a reputation in Paris for putting on one of the more fun shows during its Fashion Week. As a result, expectations are high for their first-ever runway show for their brand, Opening Ceremony. Social media activity is on high alert. There are freebies to Instagram (an advanced repair skin serum to help mask tomorrow's hangovers), an open bar and snacks (cronuts!), plus celebrities: Justin Bieber, Rihanna and Miguel are all here. KENYA HUNT

Opening Ceremony

Just when the air can't get any buzzier, a fleet of 20 hot wheels — including a Jaguar, a Porsche and a Bentley — come speeding onto the set. The models are in the cars, waiting to make their runway entrances. With a setup like that, who even cares about the clothes? Surprisingly, the ethno-graphic coats, jackets, trousers, dresses and skirts, which all reference traditional Korean garments, don't get lost in all of the production extras and showbiz-y-ness. The collection feels like a kid sister to Kenzo. Remember this show as the moment that shot Lim and Leon to a whole new level of celebrity. KENYA HUNT

Tommy Hilfiger

Right from the opening series of leather scuba dresses, Hilfiger's message is clear: Move over boys — girls do more on the beach than just tan. These Cali babes have a sporty spirit that evokes surfing (colorblocked dresses and skirts in wet suit material, beach-to-taco-stand swim shorts); skating (heather gray cropped hoodies, boxy chambray jackets and Hawaiian print bowling shirts); and bonfires, my personal fave (frayed knit tunics and chunky ribbed sweaters). The sunset color palette of washed-out oranges and pale pinks add just the right amount of femininity. TINA CHADHA

"When people are buying these things at clubs or even on the street, the truth is you don't know what else might be in it, and that's why you never really know how someone's going to respond. It's not like this is regulated."
Dr. Stork

LIFESIZE

What to know about 'molly,' the new 'it' drug

Kids' health. Why this all-the-rage stimulant attracts young people, and what you need to know as a parent.

Ecstasy has long been a popular club drug, but its molecular form — nicknamed "molly" — is going through a surge in popularity lately. Miley Cyrus sings about "dancing with molly" in her song "We Can't Stop," and a series of deaths from the drug in the past two weeks is being linked to a possible bad batch sweeping the East Coast. Young people love it because they seem to think it's a purer (and therefore safer) form of ecstasy, says Dr. Travis Stork, an emergency physician and host of TV's "The Doctors," which just premiered its sixth season. But Dr. Stork says the "safer" perception "could not be further from the truth."

"The young adult culture that's embracing this drug has this false sense of security that it's safe," says Dr. Stork. "Especially when it's in a powder form, the truth is, you have no idea what's really in it."

As a stimulant drug, molly revs up bodily functions like metabolism, heart rate, blood pressure, even brain function. But even though it's in the same drug category as caffeine, taking molly is not like just drinking a giant mug of coffee: Molly also has a psychedelic element to it, one that can cause hallucinations and feelings of euphoria and invincibility. The consequences of that high include a spike in heart rate and blood pressure, hyperthermia (when the body overheats), hyponatremia (a major sodium imbalance in the body) and seizures, all of which can be fatal.

Dr. Stork urges parents to speak to their children about the drug before their peers do so.

"There's so much misinformation out there among kids, and obviously we know that kids are willing to say or believe anything," he says. "My advice is have an honest conversation about drugs with your kids before their friends do, in a respectful, trusting way, because once that conversation's been had, if it's been had by someone else, it could be too late."

There's no "right" age to start that dialogue, he adds — it's about knowing your child, being involved in his or her life and keeping your ears open.

"If you're worried about someone else having the conversation with your child, that's the time to have the conversation," he says. "As a parent, it can be uncomfortable to bring these things up — just like the conversations about sex can be difficult to bring up — but they can also be incredibly, incredibly meaningful."

Horoscope

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Discussions will lead to all sorts of interesting offers. Share your thoughts and look for someone who shares your sentiments.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Don't let laziness or lack of insight cost you your reputation or your position. Now's the time for you to stick to the rules.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Keep your story straight. You need to put more emphasis on fixing up your space or finding concrete ways to lower your costs.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. You may face a conflict between your personal desires and your workload. Tend to your obligations before you move on to more enjoyable pastimes.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Your unusual approach to financial, health or legal matters will leave a lasting impression.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Consistency will be an issue today. Unpredictable situations will put added pressure on you to make a decision. Your best option is to find a physical way to blow off steam.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. If you're facing a challenge, seek out people who have been in similar situations. An offer could result if you take the initiative.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Live aggressively and make needed changes in your life. It's time for you to step into the spotlight.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Avoid disagreements. Consider the consequences that will result from the choice you make. By looking out for others, you will gain the support you need.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Experience will be key when it comes to overcoming a challenge or besting an adversary. Problems due to responsibilities can be expected. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

US policy is full of gas

If the Geneva Gas Protocol was signed in 1925, then why wasn't there any grand dispute about Agent Orange being used during the Vietnam War? From 1961 to 1971, 400,000 people were killed, and 500,000 children had birth defects. Yet, we designate Syria as wrong for utilizing chemical weapons against its own people. We are going back to the double-standards format again. Let's look at the bright side: America must not have any deficits, because we need funds to fight a war.
CALVIN DAVIS, VIA EMAIL

Let neither flag nor your patriotism fade away

This Wednesday is Sept. 11, the anniversary of when infamy struck our nation and many lives were taken out of hate for what our country stands for — freedom for all. Twelve years have come to pass, but we must never forget, and generations from now need always to remember 9/11 and how we came together. Furthermore, I firmly believe that as Americans we should fly the American flag on 9/11 outside homes, offices, apartments and stores throughout this great nation of ours. Sadly, these flags have all but disappeared since that fateful day. Our patriotism was what pulled us through some tough times and it shouldn't take another attack to galvanize us toward solidarity again. Our flag is the fabric of our country and together we can prevail against all adversity. So let's fly the flag of our country. Remember this: The colors of our country are red, white and blue, and these colors don't run.

Eagles ring in Kelly era with win on road

NFL. Philly ran out to a big first-half lead and held on in the fourth quarter to win in Week 1.

The dawning of a new era in Philadelphia got off to a good start just down I-95 in our nation's capital.

New head coach Chip Kelly and the Eagles took a 33-27 win over the Redskins as they started the season in promising fashion. The one small caveat: Mike Vick was seen limping and favoring his groin in the fourth quarter.

We take a look at three things that went right for the Eagles:

1 New offense
Chip Kelly's offense certainly didn't disappoint in its national debut. The coach who is known for being unconventional was very unconventional. He ran 30 plays in the first quarter — the most for any NFL team since 2009. He stacked receivers behind receivers. He split offensive tackles out wide and kept just three guys on the line. He let Mike Vick loose on the read option. The Redskins looked dazed and confused all night. Kelly even went for a fourth down on the opening drive and got it.

2 Mixed up
The Eagles defense gets mixed reviews in the opener. The unit started strong by forcing two quick turnovers and a safety. The team had just 13 turnovers in 2012 — dead last in NFL — so they are ahead of the game already. Brandon Boykin got an interception. Trent Cole forced a fumble and collected a safety, while being a disruptive force all night. Cary Williams rushed on a cornerback blitz and recorded a sack. Williams added a pick in the second half and broke up a pass play when Washington was trying to complete an improbable comeback late in the fourth quarter. That was the good. The Eagles defense looked overmatched in the second half. Robert Griffin III picked on Boykin and rookie corner Jordan Poyer pretty much at will as the defense let a 27-point lead evaporate. This unit is very much a work in progress.

DeSean Jackson and the Eagles offense spent most of the first half dancing all over the Redskins defense. / GETTY IMAGES

3 Pick up the pace
The pace of the game was blistering, just as was advertised. The Eagles ran a play in 28 seconds on average. Eagles scoring drives averaged one minute and 44 seconds. The Redskins defense couldn't keep up, and they looked absolutely gassed at halftime. Several defensive players came up lame, clutching hamstrings and sitting out with muscle cramps. Even the Eagles players were getting tired. At one point, LeSean McCoy was seen trying to catch his breath on the sideline after a 10-yard gain. Defensive coordinators around the NFL are going to have to adjust — and fast.

Hamels struggling for wins this season

MLB. Cole Hamels continues to thrive on the mound despite a lack of run support.

Cole Hamels continues to pitch better with each outing, but the results are unfortunately the same. The $144-million ace typically can't buy a win. Hamels pitched his best game of the season a week ago Monday.

Hamels gave up just one run on two hits in seven superb innings. He pounded the plate, with 80 percent of his pitches landing for strikes. He threw first pitch strikes to 22 of the 24 Nats he faced. He struck out eight. He did everything except win.

"You just go out there and try to focus," Hamels said.

Hamels has done a remarkably good job doing just that in this lost season. Back in 2009, Hamels reacted poorly when things didn't go his way. That's not so this season.

Hamels is 7-13, but he has been tremendous since May. It's just an odd season for the one-time World Series MVP. The way he's pitching he could finish close to a 3.00 ERA in what will be his worst win/loss record.

"That's why those stats are so deceiving," a NL scout said. "After getting off to a rough start, Hamels has pitched great. Can you imagine what his record would be if he was with the Dodgers or the Red Sox? Forget the wins and the losses. It's just that the Phillies don't get any runs for him."

The numbers don't lie. Only six regular starters in the NL receive less run support than Hamels (3.33 runs per game), including teammate Cliff Lee (3.07).

"It's hard to explain when you look at his numbers," Jayson Werth said. "It's just been a tough year for Cole."

Lee was 6-9 with a 3.16 ERA last season. His ERA was 11th-best in the NL, but Lee didn't win a game until July 4 in 2012.

Hamels did pick up a win Sunday. / GETTY IMAGES

"You can't worry about things you can't control," Lee said. "You only can focus on what you can do. When I look back at last year, all I can say is that it was a very strange one for me. When you look at Cole this season, he's having a very strange season. All you can do is pitch as well as you can and then start over next season."

Lee did just that and he's 12-6 with nearly the same ERA (3.01) as last season.

"Baseball is a funny game," Werth said. "You never know what's going to happen. That makes it interesting."

Niners slap back at Packers

San Francisco head coach Jim Harbaugh took a shot at Green Bay linebacker Clay Matthews yesterday, accusing Matthews of slapping 49ers tackle Joe Staley during last Sunday's game.

"I think that young man works very hard on being a tough guy," Harbaugh said of Matthews. "He'll have some repairing to do to his image after the slap." METRO

Flyers ink young left winger Leier

NHL. The Flyers are set to open their 2013 training camp later this week at Wells Fargo Center.

The Flyers announced yesterday that they had signed left wing Taylor Leier to an entry-level contract.

The 5-foot-11 inch, 178-pound Leier recorded 27 goals and 35 assists in 64 games for the Portland Winterhawks of the Western Hockey League last season and helped power Portland to a berth in the Memorial Cup Final.

The Saskatoon, Saskatchewan native was selected in the fourth round of the 2012 NHL Entry Draft.

With Flyers training camp beginning Thursday at Wells Fargo Center, the team also announced this past weekend that noted defenseman Hal Gill will try out for the Flyers. The 38-year-old Gill is a 15-year NHL veteran and played 32 games last season with Nashville. Gill has also played with the Bruins, Maple Leafs, Penguins and Canadiens.

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Red Sox (87-58)

Having won eight of their last 10, the Red Sox have regained the top spot in the rankings as they now have the best record in baseball and are playing some of their best ball of the season. Their offense is red-hot, scoring 67 runs in their last five games, highlighted by the 20 run game against Detroit last week. Boston is in Tampa Bay this week for three.

Braves (85-57)

Atlanta has now lost four games in a row and because of Boston's hot streak, the Braves have lost their No. 1 ranking here.

No. 3

Cardinals (83-60)

By sweeping the Pirates over the weekend, St. Louis has opened up a 1 1/2-game lead in the NL Central over both Pittsburgh and Cincy.

Athletics (83-60)

The A's picked a good time to win eight of their last 10 as they have overtaken the Rangers for first place in the AL West.

No. 5

Dodgers (83-59)

The Dodgers have lost their last four but maintain a big lead in the NL West. They're chasing Atlanta for best NL record.

No. 6

Tigers (82-61)

Even though Detroit lost two of three to Boston last week, they still lead the AL Central by 5 1/2 games. They're scoring 5.09 runs per game.

No. 7

Reds (82-62)

Cincy is in good position to be one of the two NL wild-card teams as they have an eight game lead over Washington.

No. 8

Rangers (81-61)

If the season ended today, the Rangers would be in but the wild-card race is tight as five teams are within 3 1/2 games.

No. 9

Pirates (81-61)

Like the Reds, Pittsburgh is in a good position to be one of the wild cards. They are in Texas for three games with the Rangers this week.

Case Name: William Smith
Date of Birth: July 8, 1937
Date of Filing: October 10, 2012

Notice of Hearing
Date: October 18, 2013
Time: 2:00 PM
Place: Courtroom 2-F, Richland County Judicial Center, 1701 Main Street Street, Columbia, SC 29201
Whereas, the Petitioner is unable to locate and serve DANA SMITH AND WILLIAM SMITH
NOW THEREFORE, DANA SMITH AND WILLIAM SMITH are summoned to be and appear before Judge Amy W. McCulloch at Columbia, SC on October 18, 2013 at 2:00 PM to show cause why Gloria Sealy should not be granted the relief requested in her Peition. A full copy of the Summons and Petition are available from the above-named attorney. If you do not appear at the hearing or file an Answer, the relief requested will most likely be granted.
